

YEALMPTON WOODLAND BURIAL

COFFINS and URNS

Our burial ground is for people who care for our natural environment and want to preserve the beauty of the meadow and developing woodland. We do not, therefore, allow any embalming fluids, metals or plastics of any kind and everything brought onto the site must be biodegradable and/or made from a renewable source.

Many funeral directors offer a range of coffins made from polished hardwood which we do not consider to be appropriate. Instead we encourage use of a coffin, urn or shroud that has been made from a bio-degradable, recycled or renewable source material such as soft wood, willow, bamboo, straw, paper or felt. These materials return to the soil as nature intended and do not impede the growth of seedlings or saplings planted in memory of those who are buried here. There are some examples below and you will find information on some of the firms that supply suitable products overleaf.

Woven Willow

These can be made to measure, look friendly and, with posies of flowers tucked in around the edges, beautiful.

Bamboo

These coffins look wonderful. Ecoffins in Kent import them from China where the workers are paid fair wages. They are packed like Russian dolls inside each other and sent by sea, so keeping environmental damage and carriage costs to a minimum.

Cardboard

These are practical, attractive and good value. They are available in a wood-like finish in many colours and patterns, or plain white. White ones can be painted, or collages can be added, making them personal and very special.

Papier Maché

Made by hand from recycled newspapers and hand finished with paper made from 100% mulberry pulp, the Ecopod is available in a range of colours with screen printed motifs, plain white, or gold. Each wondrous shape can be individually decorated to order. Arka Ecopod also manufacture the Acorn urn for the storage of ashes after cremation. These are made from recycled paper, available in a number of colours and fully biodegradable.

Straw

Eco-Rest coffins are constructed from straw-based board derived from agricultural waste and bonded together with a non-toxic resin. They can be natural or veneered to look like traditional coffins.
